As Legend Has It...

In the 1800's a Hotel was Built, in the Hickman Valley, on this location, to accommodate the hard-working men of the Mines & Rails, that ran through the Valley.

A General Store was later added on to provide supplies to the families that settled in the Valley. The Hotel & Store provided many services to the community. One of which was the "Soiled Doves" who would stand on the Balcony and "show their wears", as the men arrived to pick up supplies and Tip One Back at the end of a long hard day.

(You could have called it their one stop shop)

Shortly after WWI, the beautiful bar back, made of the now extinct, Wormy Chestnut & wood interior were created by a local woodworker, cutting each board with a hand saw, making the wonderful arches throughout the building.

In the late 1700s this area was a major player in The Great Whisky Rebellion. When the Federal Government imposed a tax on the sale & trade of all alcohol. Local back woods distilleries in this area resisted the tax by attacking (often tar & feathering) the Federal Revenue Officers who attempted to collect it. There attempts were futile. So, when The Temperance Movement forced Prohibition, making the sale of Alcohol Illegal, In January 1920, this area would have none of it. Moonshiners brewed & sold their spirits to the Hotel. People came from all around to partake in the illegal alcohol and hedonistic shenanigans. Buttons located around the perimeter of what is now the Game Room, were used to notify the Tender there was a need for "service" in certain areas of this Speak Easy. On December 5th 1933 Prohibition was repealed & 13 Days later this Establishment was granted its Liquor License to operate legally. Which is the same Liquor License in use today.

Over the Years this location has treated the hard-working people of this area as a welcome guest with Food, Fun & Spirits as Rooster's Roadhouse still does today. (Minus the Soiled Doves)
